TAMMY likes to dance and sing.
Tammy likes to play tennis and swim.
Tammy likes doing lots of things.
There is one thing that Tammy does not like.

Tammy does not like taking Pepper for nature walks.
"Kid stuff," says Tammy.

"Off you go," says Tammy's mother firmly.

And Tammy and Pepper set off for a walk.

"I want that leaf," says Pepper.

"Oh no, Pepper, that's poison sumac," says Tammy just in time.

"How about that one?" says Pepper.

"I'll reach it for you," says Tammy.

But her foot slips and she falls splash into a green pool.

"Oh Tammy, look at that pretty butterfly!"
"It's a tiger swallowtail," says Tammy.
They start chasing it and Tammy rolls down a slope and cuts her knee and tears her brand-new jeans.

By the end of the afternoon Pepper has twenty-three leaves, some pretty pebbles and a flower or two.

And Tammy has burrs in her hair, torn jeans, and a green-stained shirt.

On the way home they see Peter, the new neighbor, and his little sister.

Tammy tries to hide.

"Hi!" shouts Pepper as loud as she can.

"Hi!" says Peter. "Hello, Tammy. Gosh it's nice to see a real outdoor girl. I was afraid to ask you before, Tammy—would you and Pepper like to come on a wienie roast?"

Happily, Tammy and Pepper say yes.

They race into the house and tell their mother about the wienie roast.

"Well, Tammy," says her mother, "aren't you glad you went for a walk after all? Now for goodness sake go and tidy up, both of you."

And they did. Here are some of the clothes that Tammy and Pepper found in their wardrobe.
